Please see me about the problem we've talked about, namely, of developing a success record of shutting down various NATO activities that are no longer needed and tightening up the International operation and tightening up the US Mission and reducing some costs and improving our financing situation by reducing our share. We need to have a list of steps like that we've either succeeded with or undertaken or some sort of record of accomplishment, or we're going to have problems, and properly so with the Congress.

Gene, make a note that we've got to get back to Menzies as soon as we know who's coming for the Secretary of Defense and whether or not they want to have dinner with him.
